Performance Partnership Pilots for Disconnected Youth (P3)

HARTFORD

Promise Zone Partnerships Advancing Youth Together in Hartford (PATH)

- 100 disconnected/opportunity youth involved in the justice system or at-risk

- Work-based learning opportunities integrated with academic and technical instruction through a virtual network of providers

- Federally designated Promise Zone over an 18-month period

By the end of the pilot period...

- We will have a systemic platform where the connections between providers and programs are automated and, therefore, lessens our need for human intervention to make those connections.

- Through the use of technology, in addition to improving outcomes, the reach of our youth-serving system will go farther and deeper than ever before.
Youth should be on a positive and mutually-reinforcing youth development pathway.

To ensure this,
Promise Zone PATH
builds a virtual network of bridges between databases and applications of existing evidence-based programs.

Promise Zone PATH collects information about youth on a common dashboard that includes key life domain factors, status, goals, and connections.

Promise Zone PATH identifies disconnected youth experiencing gaps in service and matches youth to needed services and programs.
Promise Zone PATH tracks youth progress on a pathway to success which can help with retention services and data intelligence to ensure consistent engagement and positive outcomes.

What does P3 mean to Hartford?

Build upon existing work

- Convene providers, leverage existing work, and establish a citywide commitment.

- Build evidence about what works.

- Explore ways to leverage funding, complement ongoing work, and align public-private strategies.

A note on housing...

Youth housing is desperately needed in Hartford; however, we currently do not have any federal funds eligible for P3.

Implement new strategies and practices

- Identify federal barriers and dispel myths.

- Identify and pursue administrative, legislative, and regulatory changes.

- Explore and test innovative ways of serving youth using greater flexibility.

- Develop shared measures to better track progress.
