

The Trump Administration’s Public Charge Proposal Could Impact 385,000 People in the Old Line State

The Trump Administration is proposing radical changes to the “public charge” rule that would make it more difficult for immigrants to obtain a green card if they use any of a wide range of public benefits. If finalized, the proposed “public charge” rule would result in declines in immigrant families’ access to the basics we all need to survive. The proposal would make—and has already made—immigrant families afraid to seek programs that help them stay strong and productive and raise children who thrive.

By threatening immigration status when immigrants use programs to meet their family’s basic needs, the proposal would make immigrant families in Maryland afraid to access programs—like health care and food assistance—that support essential needs. This fact sheet describes the potentially impacted population in the Old Line State, including several counties facing the greatest impact.

MARYLAND

Approximately 385,000 people, including 136,00 children, may be impacted.

NATIONWIDE

Approximately 26 million people, including 9.2 million children, may be impacted.

MARYLAND COUNTIES FACING THE GREATEST IMPACT

County	Total Population	Estimated Number of Potentially Impacted	Estimated Share of County Population
Montgomery	1,026,000	130,000	13%
Prince Georges	898,000	116,000	13%
Baltimore	826,000	40,000	5%
Baltimore City	621,000	27,000	4%
Anne Arundel	560,000	20,000	4%

Source: 2012-2016 5-Year American Community Survey Public Use Microdata Sample (ACS/PUMS); 2012-2016 5-Year American Community Survey (ACS) estimates accessed via American FactFinder. Custom Tabulations by Manatt Health, 9/30/2018., <https://www.manatt.com/Insights/Articles/2018/Public-Charge-Rule-Potentially-Chilled-Population>. Calculation of potentially chilled population based on families with at least one non-citizen and earned income under 250% of the federal poverty line.

The public charge proposal will make communities sicker.

Families' fear to participate in Medicaid could result in coverage losses throughout Maryland, decreased access to care, and worse health outcomes for the entire family, including U.S. citizen children.

For financially vulnerable health care providers, Medicaid is an indispensable funding source for hospitals and clinics. Losing Medicaid coverage would negatively impact the health outcomes of immigrant families. It would also harm the financial security of hospitals and local economies.

The proposed public charge rule will increase hunger.

Decreased participation among Maryland immigrant families in food assistance could lead to higher levels of poverty and food insecurity.

For farmers and local economies, reduced food assistance may reduce the well-documented positive economic impacts of programs that help households purchase produce from businesses of all types and sizes.

Maryland is fighting back.

Federal law requires the Administration to consider public comments on the rule's impact, and leading Maryland advocates and human services providers in our state are joining thousands more nationwide to speak out.

If we want our communities to thrive, every family must be able to stay together and receive the care, services, and support they need to remain healthy and productive. We invite you to join us in submitting comments to express opposition and encourage your networks to do the same. To submit a comment and fight back, visit ProtectingImmigrantFamilies.org.

For more information, contact Renato Rocha (rrocha@clasp.org) or Jackie Vimo (vimo@nilc.org).