

Statement for the Record
U.S. House Committee on the Judiciary
Full Committee Markup of H.R. 2820, the “Dream Act of 2019”; and H.R. 2821, the “American Promise Act of 2019.”
Wednesday, May 22, 2019
2141 Rayburn House Office Building, Washington, D.C. 20515

Chairman Nadler, Ranking Member Collins, and Members of the House Committee on the Judiciary, we thank you for the opportunity to submit this statement for the record for the May 22 markup on H.R. 2820, The Dream Act of 2019 and H.R. 2821, the American Promise Act of 2019.

The Center for Law and Social Policy (CLASP) is a national, nonpartisan, anti-poverty organization advancing federal, state, and local policy solutions that work for low-income people. We are proud to support these bills and urge the committee to ensure that the bills remain inclusive and accessible to all DACA beneficiaries, TPS holders, and the full Dreamer population. We believe these bills represent a critical step to correcting the wrong that was inflicted upon hundreds of thousands of individuals and their families as a result of the Administration’s decision to end the Deferred Action for Childhood Arrivals Program (DACA) program as well Temporary Protected Status (TPS) for six designated countries.

The Administration’s decision to end DACA in September 2017 after months of mixed messages created immediate harm for DACA recipients and their communities across the country. Since then, the termination of DACA has created anxiety and uncertainty for DACA recipients and their families, despite nationwide federal court injunctions blocking the Trump Administration’s decision to rescind the program.

Since 2012, DACA protections have allowed more than 820,000 immigrant youth to remain in the United States, access employment and driver’s licenses, and pursue postsecondary education without fear of deportation.¹ While three federal nationwide injunctions² have blocked the Trump Administration from stripping protections from current DACA beneficiaries, the program is no longer accepting first-time applicants. This September 5 DACA decision means that more than 200,000 young Dreamers who were waiting to turn 15 to meet the program’s age requirements have been precluded from DACA’s protections, dashing their hopes for a better future.³ DACA recipients and other undocumented immigrants who entered the U.S. as children need a permanent legislative fix to achieve long-term economic security, attain overall stability, and continue contributing to their communities.

Enacted in 1990, TPS provides humanitarian relief for immigrants seeking refuge due to ongoing armed conflict, natural disasters, and untenable conditions in their countries of origin. TPS is a temporary legal status that allows TPS holders from designated countries to work and remain in the U.S. Since September 2017, the Trump Administration has rescinded TPS for six countries⁴—El Salvador, Nicaragua, Haiti, Sudan, Nepal, and Honduras—and ended Deferred Enforced Departure (DED) for Liberia. However, a federal court ruling has blocked the Administration from terminating TPS for 300,000 immigrants from El Salvador, Nicaragua, Haiti, and Sudan.⁵ While the court ruling is a significant victory, the Supreme Court has yet to act on the pending DACA and TPS litigation.

Unfortunately, President Trump's demand for a costly, unnecessary wall and attacks on asylum-seeking families at our southwest border has distracted Congress from focusing on passing a permanent legislative fix for Dreamers and TPS recipients. DACA beneficiaries and TPS holders continue to be caught in a state of uncertainty about their futures. Every day that Congress and the Administration fail to act, they further endanger the economic security and wellbeing of these individuals and their families.

Without legislation and immediate relief for DACA and TPS recipients, hundreds of thousands of immigrant families will remain in limbo. If Congress does not act soon, these beneficiaries will lose their ability to work and feed their families when their legal protections expire. DACA beneficiaries and TPS holders stand to lose their homes, businesses, and opportunities to access higher education and driver's licenses.

Impact on Family Members of DACA and TPS recipients

Many DACA and TPS recipients live in mixed-status families and are financially supporting their family members. Stripping away temporary protections would be devastating for their economic security and hinder their upward mobility. An estimated 34 percent of immediately eligible DACA recipients live in families with annual incomes below the federal poverty line.⁶ In fact, DACA recipients are often their families' primary breadwinners. Research shows that DACA has significantly improved economic outcomes for recipients. Through DACA, recipients have increased their incomes by 69 percent, enabling them to purchase cars and homes as well as climb out of poverty.⁷

Furthermore, more than quarter of DACA recipients have a child who is a U.S. citizen.⁸ An estimated 273,000 TPS holders from El Salvador, Honduras, and Haiti are also parents to U.S.-citizen children.⁹ Research shows that children benefit when their parents are mentally and physically healthy and have access to higher education and better-quality jobs. Indeed, one study found that mothers' DACA status promoted improved mental health for their children.¹⁰ Loss of DACA and TPS will have the opposite effect, severely undermining children's development and wellbeing. Families will be forced to live in fear of being separated due to deportation as well as experience stress over financial hardships—all of which put children's healthy development at risk. CLASP research conducted in 6 states across the country found that young citizen children, including many who have parents with DACA, are experiencing alarming levels of anxiety, disrupted routines, and decreased access to critical services.¹¹

It is also important to note that people forced to return to their home countries, or who may be subject to deportation, would face challenges to reintegration. For many DACA beneficiaries, the U.S. is the only home they've ever known. And the children and families they might leave behind would face economic hardship.

Contributions of DACA and TPS Recipients to the Economy and Our Communities

DACA beneficiaries and TPS holders, as well as their families, are long-term residents with deep roots in their communities. All DACA beneficiaries and some TPS recipients arrived in the U.S. as children.¹² Among these immigrants, 50 percent of Salvadorans and Hondurans and 16 percent of Haitians have resided in the U.S. for 20 years or more.¹³

DACA and TPS recipients are integral members of our nation's community and economy. DACA recipients immigrated to the U.S. before turning 16 (on average, when they were just six years old).¹⁴ Today, they are 25 years old on average.¹⁵ These young people have been students and contributing members of our society for at least a decade. A large share of DACA and TPS recipients are students or parents of children and youth enrolled in our nation's secondary and postsecondary institutions.

In fact, 97 percent of DACA beneficiaries are either in school or working according to a national survey, catalyzing a strong response from business leaders and institutions of higher education across the country calling for the Trump Administration and Congress to protect Dreamers.¹⁶ Passage of a legislative solution for DACA recipients as well as other Dreamers would also be a powerful incentive for educational attainment. A recent study by the Migration Policy Institute estimates that approximately 100,000 undocumented students graduate from U.S. high schools every year.¹⁷

Similarly, labor force participation for TPS holders from El Salvador, Honduras, and Haiti ranges from 81 to 88 percent.¹⁸ DACA beneficiaries and TPS holders are educators, innovators, lawyers, public servants, health care professionals, and business owners. They're also employed in the construction, hospitality, and service sectors. Without work authorization and protected status, DACA and TPS recipients will lose their ability to support themselves and risk being separated from their loved ones. Removing students, teachers, doctors, business owners, and other young immigrants will ravage their communities and the national economy. Ending DACA will reduce the U.S. Gross Domestic Product by an estimated $460 billion over the next decade.¹⁹

CLASP Urges Swift Passage of Legislation for Dreamers and TPS Holders

Since the Supreme Court's position on DACA and TPS cases and timing on a court ruling is unknown, it's imperative that Congress act quickly to pass the Dream Act of 2019 and the American Promise Act of 2019. Together, these bills would provide a clear pathway to citizenship for a wide range of DACA and TPS recipients as well as other undocumented youth and DED recipients.

As an organization committed to ensuring that policy solutions work for low-income people, CLASP strongly recommends that a legislative solution must enable youth and adults who reflect the full diversity and talents of the undocumented youth population—including those who have not pursued a traditional college education or military service—to be eligible for a path to permanent residency and citizenship. For example, we strongly support the provision included in the Dream Act of 2019 that would create a pathway to citizenship through employment. In addition, it's also critical to ensure a hardship exception for Dreamers who may not be able to work, attend school, or join the military due to certain circumstances, such as raising children. In our Expanding the Dream report, we highlight the importance of a legislative solution that is as inclusive as possible: not only by ensuring broad eligibility that reflects the realities of the undocumented population but also by avoiding unrealistic requirements and restrictions that put potential beneficiaries at greater risk of falling out of status, such as denying beneficiaries access to tax credits and other supports critical for working families and low-income students.²⁰ We also oppose any harmful provisions that would criminalize immigrant youth or further ramp up enforcement measures which are already undermining the safety and wellbeing of immigrant families and their communities.

For these reasons, CLASP urges the committee to move these bills forward swiftly, free from harmful or restrictive amendments, and provide immediate relief and economic security to immigrant families. Members who support this bill will have the support of advocates²¹; state and local elected officials; employers; and faith, labor, educational, and community leaders who recognize the invaluable contributions of Dreamers and TPS holders. According to a recent poll, most Americans strongly support letting Dreamers adjust their legal status.²²

We thank you again for the opportunity to submit this written statement for the record, and we look forward to working with you to pass a clean legislative solution that will fairly address the urgent situation facing hundreds of thousands of Dreamers and TPS recipients across the country. Should you have any questions regarding this statement, please do not hesitate to reach Wendy Cervantes, director of immigration and immigrant families, at wcervantes@clasp.org or 202-906-8059.

Endnotes

- ¹ Nicole Prchal Svajlenka, Amid Court Challenges, Here's What Will Happen If DACA Ends," Center for American Progress, August 15, 2018, <https://www.americanprogress.org/issues/immigration/news/2018/08/15/454798/amid-court-challenges-heres-will-happen-daca-ends>.
- ² National Immigration Law Center, DACA Litigation Timeline, <https://www.nilc.org/issues/daca/daca-litigation-timeline>.
- ³ Faye Hipsman, Barbara Gomez-Aguinaga, and Randy Capps. "DACA at Four: Participation in the Deferred Action Program and Impacted on Recipients. The Migration Policy Institute, August 2016, <http://www.migrationpolicy.org/research/daca-four-participation-deferred-action-program-and-impacts-recipients>.
- ⁴ Jill H. Wilson, Congressional Research Service, Temporary Protected Status: Overview and Current Issues, October 10, 2018, <https://fas.org/sgp/crs/homesecc/RS20844.pdf>
- ⁵ American Civil Liberties Union, CRISTA RAMOS, et al., Plaintiffs, v. KIRSTJEN NIELSEN, et al., Defendants. United States District Court, Northern District of California, October 3, 2018, https://www.aclusocal.org/sites/default/files/aclu_ramos_20181003_order_granting_prelim_injunction.pdf.
- ⁶ Zenén Jaimes Pérez, A Portrait of Deferred Action for Childhood Arrivals Recipients, United We Dream, October 2015. <http://unitedwedream.org/wp-content/uploads/2015/10/DACA-report-final-1.pdf>.
- ⁷ Tom K. Wong, Greisa Martinez Rosas, Adam Luna, Henry Manning, Adrian Reyna, Patrick O'Shea, Tom Jawetz, and Philip E. Wolgin, "DACA Recipients' Economic and Educational Gains Continue to Grow," Center for American Progress, August 28, 2017, <https://www.americanprogress.org/issues/immigration/news/2017/08/28/437956/daca-recipients-economic-educational-gains-continue-grow>.
- ⁸ Tom Wong et al., Results from Tom K. Wong et al., 2017 National DACA Study.
- ⁹ Ibid.
- ¹⁰ Jens Hainmueller, Duncan Lawrence, Linna Martén, et al. Protecting unauthorized immigrant mothers improves their children's mental health, Science Magazine, August 2017, <http://science.sciencemag.org/content/sci/early/2017/08/30/science.aan5893.full.pdf>.
- ¹¹ Wendy Cervantes, Rebecca Ullrich and Hannah Matthews, Our Children's Fear: Immigration Policy Effects on Young Children, CLASP, March 2018, <https://www.clasp.org/publications/report/brief/our-childrens-fear-immigration-policies-effects-young-children>.
- ¹² Robert Warren and Donald Kerwin, A Statistical and Demographic Profile of the US Temporary Protected Status Populations from El Salvador, Honduras, and Haiti, Journal of Migration and Human Security, 2017, pps.577-592, Center for Migration Studies. <http://cmsny.org/publications/jmhs-tps-elsalvador-honduras-haiti>.
- ¹³ Ibid.
- ¹⁴ The Center for American Progress, "State by State DACA Fact Sheets," Interfaith Worker Justice, 2017, <http://www.iwj.org/resources/state-by-state-daca-fact-sheets>.
- ¹⁵ Tom Wong, Sanaa Abrar, Tom Jawetz, Ignacia Rodriguez Kmec, Patrick O'Shea, Greisa Martinez Rosas, and Phillip E. Wolguin, Results from Tom K. Wong et al., 2018 National DACA Study, Center for American Progress, August 2018.
- ¹⁶ Tom Wong, et al., "DACA Recipients' Economic and Educational Gains Continue to Grow." "Open Letters From Leaders of American Industry," September 20, 2017, <https://www.businessleadersdreamletter.com>; Isabel Fattal, "How Higher-Education Leaders Are Fighting for DACA," The Atlantic, September 1, 2017, <https://www.theatlantic.com/education/archive/2017/09/how-higher-education-leaders-are-fighting-for-daca/538740>.
- ¹⁷ Jie Zong and Jeanne Batalova, "How Many Unauthorized Immigrants Graduate from U.S High Schools Annually?" Migration Policy Institute, April 2019.
- ¹⁸ Robert Warren and Donald Kerwin, A Statistical and Demographic Profile of the US Temporary Protected Status Populations from El Salvador, Honduras, and Haiti, Journal of Migration and Human Security, pps.577-592, 2017, Center for Migration Studies, <http://cmsny.org/publications/jmhs-tps-elsalvador-honduras-haiti>.
- ¹⁹ Nicole Prchal Svajlenka, Tom Jawetz, and Angie Bautista-Chavez, "A New Threat to DACA Could Cost States Billions of Dollars," Center for American Progress, July 2017, <https://www.americanprogress.org/issues/immigration/news/2017/07/21/436419/new-threat-daca-cost-states-billions-dollars>.
- ²⁰ Duy Pham and Wendy Cervantes, Expanding the Dream: Engaging Immigrant Youth and Young Adults in Postsecondary and Adult Education, CLASP, November 2017, <https://www.clasp.org/publications/report/brief/expanding-dream-engaging-immigrant-youth-and-adults-postsecondary-and>.
- ²¹ National TPS Alliance, <https://nationaltpsalliance.org>.
- ²² America's Voice, https://americasvoice.org/press_releases/cnn-poll-83-12-americans-want-dreamers.